APPLICATION FOR LEAVE TO FILE AMICI CURIAE BRIEF

Pursuant to California Rule of Court 8.520(f), T. Anthony Quinn, Daniel Schnur and Robert M. Stern respectfully request leave to file an amici curiae brief in support of Defendant and Appellants the State of California; Katie Hagen, in her official capacity as Director of the California Department of Industrial Relations; and Intervenor and Appellants Protect App-Based Drivers and Services; Davis White; Keith Yandell (collectively “Appellants”).

Dr. T. Anthony Quinn has more than 50 years of experience with California government. He served for five years as a member of the Fair Political Practices Commission. In addition, he was a legislative consultant in elections and redistricting, a gubernatorial appointee in economic development, and a special assistant to the attorney general. He has written extensively on California government and politics, including on the California initiative process, and he has been involved in both initiative and referendum campaigns. Dr. Quinn is a strong believer in the people’s right to exercise their reserved powers through direct democracy.

Daniel Schnur is a former Chairman of the California Fair Political Practices Commission and founded the Voices of Reform project, which laid the foundation for California’s redistricting reform. He is an Adjunct Professor at the University of Southern California’s Annenberg School of Communications; the University of California – Berkeley’s Institute of Governmental Studies; and Pepperdine University’s School of Public Policy. Mr. Schnur has also taught at the John F. Kennedy School at Harvard and George Washington University. He believes the ballot initiative process is a hallmark in our state’s experiment in direct democracy and, therefore, should be “jealously guarded” by the courts.

Robert M. Stern is past President of the Center for Governmental Studies in Los Angeles. He has co-authored numerous books, including “Democracy by Initiative: Shaping California’s Fourth Branch of Government.” He was a principal co-author of the Political Reform Act of 1974, a wide-ranging initiative upheld by the California Supreme Court in the face of a single-subject challenge. While he voted against Prop. 22, he believes that the initiative process is an important part of California elections, and that the courts should defer to the will of the people.

For these reasons, and those more fully expressed in the attached brief, Daniel Schnur, T. Anthony Quinn and Robert M. Stern request leave to file the attached amicus curiae brief in support of Appellants.

I. INTRODUCTION

Does money matter in ballot measure elections in California? Definitely. Is it outcome determinative? Definitely not. California’s voters have proven by their response to dozens of ballot measures over many decades that they cannot “be bought.”

One example is the battle over a large increase in tobacco taxes in 1988, in which supporters of Proposition 99 spent just $1.84 million against more than $21.2 million spent by the tobacco industry. The measure easily won. On the same ballot, the insurance industry spent $55.87 million on a “no fault” insurance measure, Proposition 104, which was defeated 25% to 75%.<sup>1</sup> These are just two examples. We list 13 others below in which an enormous spending advantage of more than 10 to 1 on the YES side of a statewide ballot measure did not result in passage of the measure.

California’s voters derive information about ballot measures from a variety of sources, including media coverage and endorsements,<sup>2</sup> political party endorsements,<sup>3</sup> the Attorney General’s Official Title and Summary, the Summary by the Legislative Analyst, and the arguments and rebuttals “for” and “against” each measure.<sup>4</sup> While the voters certainly are influenced by spending on advertising for and against ballot measures, their decision-making has proven to be, over many decades, far more nuanced and sophisticated.

Finally, recent amendments to the Political Reform Act, requiring that ballot measure advertisements more clearly display the “Top 3 Contributors” funding the ads, presumably have also increased voter awareness.<sup>5</sup>

II. ARGUMENT

A. Money and Ballot Measures

One could say that the “modern” era of California direct democracy began in 1972 with enactment by the voters of the California Coastal Conservation Initiative (Proposition 20). Frustrated with inaction in the Legislature, environmental groups sensed that the time was ripe to protect the state’s awe-inspiring coastline via the ballot box. This election marked the beginning of proponents placing very complex, and often lengthy, statutes and constitutional amendments on the ballot. This almost ensured that the state’s ballot proposition battles would become “big money” affairs.

Two years later, the voters enacted the Political Reform Act of 1974 following the refusal of the Legislature to deal with campaign finance reform in the wake of Watergate. These measures that came from progressives were soon followed by a far-reaching measure from the populist right, Proposition 13.

“That sound roaring out of the West – what was it? A California earthquake, a Pacific tidal wave threatening to sweep across the country? Literally it was neither, figuratively it was both. That angry noise was the sound of a middle class tax revolt and its tremors are shaking public officials from Sacramento to Washington D.C.”

(Time Magazine, Cover Story, p. 13 (June 19, 1978).)

California voters willingly upended the California political order with a ballot measure no one at the time saw coming, but which has survived largely intact—and even been expanded with subsequent initiatives—over the past 45 years. It seems obvious in hindsight that no amount of money could have stopped Proposition 13, cigarette taxes, the Coastal Act or the Political Reform Act.

Ten years after Proposition 13, four insurance-related ballot measures appeared on the November 1988 ballot. As one magazine summarized it:

“The insurance industry spent $90 million to accomplish three goals: defeat two consumer backed initiatives (Propositions 100 and 103) meant to curb its profits and more strictly regulate its rate-making activities; and pass a no-fault insurance initiative (Proposition 104) and a punitive measure (Proposition 106) .... The result was a black eye the size of Jupiter. Not only did Propositions 104 and 106 lose (no fault by a margin of three to one) but voters approved 103, the measure insurers feared most.”

(California Journal, p. 515 (Dec. 1988).)

Results like these ostensibly influenced Professor Elisabeth Gerber<sup>6</sup> to write in her 1998 study of funding for ballot measures:

“The analysis of direct legislative campaign contributions shows that economic interests are severely constrained in their ability to pass new initiatives. They direct a much larger share of their campaign contributions toward opposing than toward supporting initiatives and referendums. When they do spend in support of new initiatives, the measures they support pass at a low rate .... In short, economic interests in California are severely constrained in their ability to pass new laws by initiative.”

(Elisabeth R. Gerber, Interest Group Influence in the California Initiative Process, Public Policy Institute of California (1998) [background paper].)

Set forth below is a list of spending and results for 13 propositions that appeared on the statewide ballot in California between 2005 and 2022. In each case, the YES side outspent the NO side by a larger ratio than the Proposition 22 proponents outspent the NO side. But in the case of these 13 measures, unlike Proposition 22 (which was enacted by a 58.6% to 41.4% margin), all of them went down to defeat.

CONCLUSION

The spending advantage by the proponents of Proposition 22 did not ensure its passage. The Court should affirm the decision of the Court of Appeal.
